How many LiFePO4 batteries are there?

Here are the six LiFePO4 batteries reviewed and compared in this guide: Here's a chart comparing all the batteries on various features and specs. Looking at the comparison chart, it's clear that the six batteries are similar in many areas. But there are some notable differences and certain standout features in some of the batteries.

Are LiFePO4 batteries bad?

The biggest downside of LiFePO4 batteries is the price. They usually cost more upfront compared to other types of lithium batteries. They are much pricier than lead acid batteries. Some brands can cost up to $1000 or more.

How do I choose the right LiFePO4 battery?

Here are some quick notes to help you choose the right one for your setup. All the LiFePO4 batteries come with an internal BMS or battery management system. It protects the battery from over/under voltage, extreme temperatures, and too much current. All the batteries we've compared are rated at 100Ah (105Ah for the UT 1300).

Do LiFePO4 batteries have a high discharge rate?

Some LiFePO4 batteries can deliver high discharge rates without compromising their lifespan. A battery with a 1C rating can provide the same amount of current as its capacity, while those with higher ratings cater to more demanding applications.
